This has a touch of sweet caramel with really beautifully soft red fruits, not quite brambly more red cherry, and good intensity sweetened up by a brioche edge. It's a very pleasure-filled and unpretentious second wine, which makes you warm to the winemaker. 27% of the production is for the second wine in this vintage. Maximum 20% new oak, the rest goes at some point in barrel but not for the whole ageing process, partly in vat also.

This is the second wine from one of the group of chateaus with Corbin in their names. It is a tight wine, firm with tannins and with a concentrated texture and flavors of over-extraction. That said, the wine will probably develop over time into something serious with a dark, dense aftertaste.
